

International University MITSO offers applicants relevant and promising specialties for the 2023/2024 academic year. If you are still undecided on the university and direction, we recommend to study the MITSO programs.

"Economic Security"

This specialty combines economic theory, legal science and information technology. Students studying here acquire the complex skills necessary to work in the field of economic security.

They learn the basics of economic theory, analysis and forecasting of economic processes, as well as financial and accounting statements of enterprises; they acquire the legal knowledge necessary to understand the legal aspects of economic security, including ownership rights, rights of confidentiality, intellectual property, etc.

An important part of the training is the study of information technology and computer security.

Graduates of the specialty "Economic security" can work in various areas related to the protection of business processes, including in government agencies, the banking sector and IT-companies.

"Information systems and technologies"

Students of this specialty acquire the skills and knowledge necessary for the creation, development and implementation of information systems, as well as the use of modern technologies for processing, storing and transmitting information.

They study programming languages: Java, Python, C++, JavaScript, SQL, PHP; methods and tools of information security and data protection; principles of networks and telecommunications.

Graduates work in the following fields: business, medicine, public administration.

"Information Resource Management".

This is another specialty related to management in the IT field. Students study operating systems, computer networks, and programming, and also gain skills as an IT project manager.

"Marketing."

Students who want to become marketers master the nuances of promoting goods and services on the market, including Internet marketing.

Graduates of the specialty are able to conduct market research, develop new products, and engage in advertising and PR.

"Jurisprudence"

The program provides an opportunity to choose a specialization: judicial, prosecutorial and investigative activities, legal regulation of labor relations, business law, advocacy and notariat.

Students gain practical skills during internships in courts, law enforcement agencies, advocacy, law firms, etc

"Economic law"

A new specialty at the university. Students study aspects related to legislation, taxation, finance, transactions, corporate law, antitrust regulation, etc.

Graduates can work as legal advisors; auditors, help organizations effectively manage their business processes, and interact with government agencies, contractors, dealers, and other third-party organizations.

"International Law."

International lawyer is engaged in the development and legal expertise of international agreements, conducts negotiations with foreign clients, provides legal support for transactions and analyzes changes in the laws of the countries - parties to the contractual relations.

Graduates are awarded the qualification "International Lawyer" with knowledge of at least two foreign languages. They can work in the Ministry of Justice of the Republic of Belarus, international law firms, and holdings.

"Management"

Students who choose this specialty will gain the knowledge and skills necessary to coordinate the activities of employees and manage production in any commercial business structure.

"World economy"

It is the study of global economic practices; analyze its possible application to increase the competitiveness of the organization, taking into account the peculiarities of the national economy.

International economists educated at MITSO find work in domestic and foreign companies, financial institutions, investment funds, representative offices of international organizations and many other areas.

"Logistics"

Students receive not only theoretical knowledge, but also practical skills in logistics companies. Graduates of the specialty can organize logistics processes, manage warehouses, maintain inventory and supply records, as well as understand marketing, economics and production management.

"Linguistic support of intercultural communication"

Here you can become a professional in the field of intercultural communication and translation. Here you can learn different languages: English, German, Chinese, Italian and others (to choose).

For non-resident students MITSO provides a dormitory. The university campus is a modern housing complex with recreation areas, cafes, a medical station, a kitchen, a laundry, wi-fi, a passageway system and 24-hour video surveillance. Near the hostel, there is a fitness and health complex.

More about the university

The Federation of Trade Unions of Belarus founded International University MITSO in 1930. Every year up to ten international conferences and Olympiads are held here.

MITSO is a comfortable educational building with spacious and bright classrooms, modern furniture and multimedia equipment. It is impossible for outsiders to enter the territory of the university, the access system works.

The university has its own courtroom, stylized audiences (according to countries, areas of work of international organizations, etc.). There is a library on the territory of the university with the possibility of online access to large electronic library resources. There is a pizzeria, coffee "islands", a dining room.

There are also branches of the university in Vitebsk and Gomel.

More information can be found on the university website.